- 12.15 pm-12.45 pm: Implementing, Measuring & Reporting Positive Impact for Sovereign Bonds Portfolios

Measuring, monitoring and reporting the positive impact component of Sovereign bonds is key when allocating this asset class in the construction of a global impact investment strategy.

At the macro level, positive impact investing is driven and monitored by governments and political bodies. The evolution of the governance, the planning and roadmap of possible incentives across various stakeholders within countries has to be properly assessed (through relevant metrics & KPIs). The monitoring and reporting of the actual trends is key to ensure that positive impact investing has a proper regulatory framework to encourage investors.

Sovereign States can be considered as the first and largest impact investors. Through their regulatory and fiscal power they also set the framework for sustainable growth. In such a context measuring how Sovereign Creditworthiness relates to the ESG performance of the economy with regards to Sustainable Development Goals can provide key information for impact investors.

Backbone is an advisory company with the aim to support the development of Impact Investing as an alternative financing and investment process.

Backbone provides technical services to investment and financial players that want to support SME-financing and other forms of social finance. Its know-how relies on a proven in-house methodology, which provides a wide-scaled analytical framework for the assessment of small growing businesses from any industry sector.

Backbone has developed a quite unique concept with setting partnerships with local financial players in every country it operates, as a mean to increase the total flow of funding to the SME segment. With sharing the risk in a proportion of roughly 20/80 (the local financial partner bears 20 % of the financial risk on deals while the external funders bears 80 %), a double impact is generated:

- 1) it allows to achieve a greater outreach to the SME segment with using the network of the local financial players to get introduced to SMEs with unmet financing needs.
- 2) it helps reinforcing the capacity of the local players to serve their existing clients with bigger loans and to provide credit to new ones.
